Turning to the issue of MPs' expenses, an inquiry has been held by the retired civil servant, Sir Thomas Legg.

He says a large number of MPs should return expenses they have received, because their claims were not 'reasonable'. Some MPs say that they were only obeying the rules at the time and should not therefore be required to pay anything back.

What is your view?

MPs should be made to pay up even if they obeyed the rules at the time	65
MPs are right to say that the rules cannot be changed retrospectively	28
Don't know	7

David Cameron has said MPs who don't pay up will not be allowed to stand as Conservative candidates at the next election, even if they obeyed the rules at the time.

Is he right or wrong to require such MPs to pay up?

Mr Cameron is right	69
Mr Cameron is wrong	20
Don't know	11

What is your general view of MPs and expenses?

Many MPs were dishonest in the past and still are	73
Many MPs were dishonest but have learned their lesson	20

The next general election must be held by next June. Do you think it should be brought forward and held immediately to purge parliament of MPs who abused the expenses system?

Yes the election should be held immediately	38
No it can wait until next spring	53
Don't know	9

Some voters say they might vote for one of the smaller political parties, or not vote at all, instead of voting for Labour, the Conservatives or Liberal Democrats, because of the expenses issue.

Would you seriously consider doing this because of this issue?

Yes, I would definitely consider switching to a smaller party or not voting at all	16
Yes I might consider switching or not voting	20
No I would probably not consider switching or not voting	23
No I would definitely not consider switching or not voting	31
